

We stand for freedom.
We stand for peace.
We stand for justice for all.

Choeying Kunsang, a former nun, spent 5 years in Drapchi Prison for joining a nonviolent freedom protest in Tibet. Her sentence was extended for singing freedom songs while in prison. She now lives in New York.

China will host the Olympics this August despite having one of the worst human rights records in the world. At this time, when the Chinese government cares about its international reputation, we have an unprecedented opportunity to push for change.

Team Tibet is bringing the nonviolent Tibetan struggle for rights and freedom into the Olympics spotlight and pressing for substantive change inside Tibet.

Tibet is not allowed to compete as a nation at the Beijing Games, but Tibetans and their supporters are already part of a team that is competing against China's Olympics propaganda to expose the reality of the worsening situation inside Tibet.

Team Tibet represents the national aspirations of the Tibetan people for freedom and human rights. We are a dedicated team of Tibetans and supporters promoting the inspiring symbol of a Tibetan National Olympic Team to educate the global public about the Chinese government's brutal occupation of Tibet.

With your help, Team Tibet will bring the message of freedom for Tibet and justice for all.
